Raila Odinga Laid To Rest, Thousands of Kenyans Bid Him Farewell

Former Kenyan Prime Minister, Raila Odinga, was laid to rest at a burial service that took place in his hometown of Bondo.

Thousands of Kenyan mourners thronged the grounds of Jaramogi Oginga Odinga University of Science and Technology to bid farewell to the man they fondly called "Baba" or father in Swahili.

Following the funeral service, Odinga's body was taken to his final resting place, the Nyamira Village of Bondo.

Kenya's President, William Ruto, who attended the burial service alongside his predecessor, Uhuru Kenyatta and former Nigerian President, Olusegun Obasanjo, described Nyamira village as "the cradle" of Odinga's "political convictions, and the sanctuary of his enduring spirit."

According to President Ruto, Odinga was "a son of the soil whose life was inextricably woven into the story of our Republic."

President Ruto added that

"The vast sea of Kenyans gathered in solemn unity reminds us that Baba's journey was never his alone; it was the journey of a people striving for freedom, dignity, and the promise of a just and equitable nation."

He said "His courage, his vision, and his unyielding faith in our collective destiny will forever illuminate the path of our nation".

According to him, "His return to Bondo was not merely a homecoming; it was the embrace of a grateful Republic bidding farewell to one of its greatest sons, a patriot who devoted his life to the cause of justice, democracy, and the enduring unity of our beloved Kenya."

Odinga died from a reported heart failure in India on Wednesday, October 15, 2025 at the age of 80.

Senator Ned Nwoko Alleges Regina Daniels Battling With Drug and Alcohol Abuse

Nigerian Senator, Ned Nwoko, has alleged that his Nollywood actress wife, Regina Daniels, is battling with drugs and alcohol abuse.

He made the allegation in a post on his official Instagram account on Sunday, October 19, 2025, a day after a video emerged in which Regina Daniels was said to have been abused domestically. Ned Nwoko had been accused of sending thugs to attack Regina Daniels.

But in his Instagram post sighted by Africa Publicity, he said "Regina's unprovoked carnage and rampage" took place in his house when he was not home.

According to him, "Regina was not always like this. Her current battle with drugs and alcohol abuse is the root of our problem."

He said "she must continue her rehabilitation program, or I fear for her life and safety."

Ned Nwoko revealed that "now she has moved a place where she will have unrestricted access to drugs."

He recounted that he has other wives and "none will ever accuse me of violence."

He alleged that "Regina is the violent one here, slapping and hitting 3 staff in the past 48 hours and destroying property, including cars and windows, for no just cause." He shared a video of the cars Regina Daniels allegedly damaged.

According to him, "the truth is, I have set a clear condition for her to accept rehab in Asokoro or outside Nigeria especially Jordan where she will not have access to drugs."

He went on to say that "a clear headed Regina would have taken Moon to the hospital but instead she even threatened to kill our resident nurse (for exposing her drugs abuse). While I took Moon to the hospital, a scene of chaos unfolded at home, orchestrated by Sammy, Regina's main drug supplier.

Ghana Set to End IMF Programme by 2026 as Economic Recovery Strengthens - BoG Governor

Dr. Johnson Pandit Asiamah

The Governor of the Bank of Ghana (BoG), Dr. Johnson Pandit Asiamah, has announced that Ghana is on track to successfully conclude its programme with the International Monetary Fund (IMF) in 2026, following significant improvements in key economic indicators.

Speaking at the 2025 IMF-World Bank Annual Meetings in Washington, D.C., Dr. Asiamah stated that Ghana has “turned the corner,” with inflation falling sharply to about 9.4 percent and economic growth surpassing programme projections.

He credited the progress to prudent monetary management, fiscal consolidation, and the innovative Gold-for-Reserves initiative, which has strengthened the country’s foreign exchange stability.

“With continued discipline and policy consistency, Ghana will be well positioned to sustain growth and financial stability beyond the IMF programme,” Dr. Asiamah said.

He recalled the economic challenges at the start of the programme, noting: “When we came in, there was a lot of liquidity and high inflation. Some even questioned whether we should cancel the programme altogether. Eight months down the line, we have turned the corner—Ghana is back. Inflation, which was nearly 24 percent, is now down to 9.4 percent, and growth is rebounding strongly.”

Dr. Asiamah explained that Ghana’s economic recovery was driven by coordinated reforms between the central bank and the Ministry of Finance, supported by IMF technical and policy guidance. He said that the mix of tight monetary policy, fiscal consolidation, and structural reforms had restored macroeconomic stability faster than anticipated.

Senator Ned Nwoko Alleges Regina Daniels Battling With Drug and Alcohol Abuse

Residents in Lagos, Nigeria are battling persistent fevers and coughs amid rise in respiratory infections, hospitals and primary health centers in the city have reported.

According to the health facilities, there has been a rapid increase in patients presenting with persistent fevers, chills, coughs, and flu-like symptoms, with some healthcare workers noting the symptoms feel eerily similar to the initial COVID-19 outbreak in 2020.

The surge in upper respiratory infections has caused anxiety among residents, who are left confused by the persistence of the illness even after traditional malaria and flu treatments.

Patients Report Ineffective Treatment and Lingering Symptoms

Lagos residents like Kabir Adeoye (42), of Hausari Ward, have been battling fever, chills, and sweating for weeks. Adeoye initially self-medicated for malaria, but his condition worsened, leaving his palms and feet feeling "as though they were on fire."

"Despite completing my medications, I still felt the same way and wondered if the drugs no longer worked," he told Saturday PUNCH.

His confusion deepened when his two children were also diagnosed with malaria, despite his strict sanitation efforts.

Another resident, Amusan, a banker, described a persistent, dry, and unrelenting cough that led to a sore throat, catarrh, and cold. Despite completing multiple rounds of medication, her symptoms intensified. She noted a disturbing coincidence when a colleague developed the exact same symptoms.

"At one point, I even worried that it could truly be COVID-19, especially after seeing reports of new cases on X in parts of the U.S. and the U.K., countries from which many people travel to Nigeria daily. I just hope it isn't what I'm fearing," Amusan said.
